A group of leading farmers of Madison county met Monday at the court house at Richmond to lay plans for a Madison County Farm Bureau. E. P. The organization plan involves preliminary publicity so that every farmer in the county may know about the work of the Farm Bureau and be familiar with the splendid accomplishments of the organization. This preliminary publicity has been worked out very thoroughly and involves the use of some very attractive posters which will be put up throughout the county very soon. Attractive wind-shield stickers, window and pole cards will follow and some very reada ble booklets and pamphlets will be mailed out to every farm owner in the county.

In connection with this campaign of information there will probably be shown some Farm Bureau moving pictures which will give further ideas of the pos sibilities of the Farm Bureau. Helton pled guilty to all charges, and because it is said his family is on the verge of starvation, Judge Johnson allowed him to execute bond in all the charges, the total being about $3,000, so that he might go home and make a crop for his wife and children. His trial is set for the October term of circuit court.

When the suggestion had reached the ears of many of the leading cattle breeders, it was regarded as humorous bit of "air talk" but like the days subsequent to the leveloping of the Bertillion sys-

pad. A small board to which mimeograph paper has been atached takes the imprint. The ower edge of the paper is started at the base of the cow's upper ip and with slight, even pressure, olled upward. The resultant nose print is a permanent record, as noses do not change with time. According to Mr. Peterson, positive identification of animals s necessary for several reasons.
